THE NEW ST. JAMES'S HOSPITAL, ANKING

THE CHURCH IN A DRAGON STRONGHOLD

ANKING is in central China, on the Yangtse River, 360 miles from the coast. As the capital of the province of Anhwei it is the governmental, military and educational centre of twenty-four millions of people. The Church commenced work there in 1894. Since 1900 this work has shown phenomenal growth.

Medical, educational and evangelistic work in the city and surrounding country is now coordinated under a staff of ten foreign and twenty-five Chinese workers.

ST. James's Hospital ranks with the largest and best hospitals in China and ministers annually in its wards and dispensary to 20,000 patients of every class. It is the only hospital in a district nearly two hundred miles square with an estimated population of five million.

The Educational and Evangelistic Work is steadily growing in size, efficiency and favor with the people. In addition to the evangelistic work in the city of Anking, a chain of outstations, already numbering twelve, has been established in the important cities and towns of the two surrounding prefectures, which together make a district the size of Massachusetts. These are in charge of trained catechists and are supervised by frequent visitation from Anking.

At present, as a result of this evangelistic work there are 260 baptized Christians and 2,000 inquirers in preparation for baptism.

The Central Parish Church of all this work is a small chapel costing originally $250 and having an uncomfortable seating capacity for 150 people. A substantial church, to cost at least $6,000 and to seat 600, is now imperatively needed.

St. Paul's High School receives pupils from the city and from the outstation primary schools and prepares them for Boone College, Wuchang and St. John's University, Shanghai. Many of the pupils are drawn from the official and wealthy classes who prefer it to the government schools on account of its efficient instruction, good discipline and high moral tone. The staff consists of two foreign and three Chinese teachers. The school is at present in inconvenient and temporary quarters which must be vacated before the parish church can be built. A splendid site of about seven acres extent has just been secured adjoining the equally large site of the hospital, girl's school and mission residences. Permanent buildings with accommodations for 120 boys will cost $12,000. Their erection should be begun at once, so that they may be ready for use in September, 1909. In view of the stupendous changes now taking place in China, the present opportunity for educational missions is unparalleled. The task of the church, as never before, resolves itself into training Christian leaders for the new China now being rapidly moulded by the forces of western civilization.

ST. AGNES'S SCHOOL is the only girls' school of any kind in Anking. It educates the girls from Christian families, trains teachers for the primary schools and hospital school for trained nurses, and has a great field in reaching the families of the higher classes. The school occupies temporary quarters which must be vacated by April, 1909. The permanent school building is already more than half finished. To complete and equip it $3,500 are needed immediately. The new building when completed will accommodate sixty boarding pupils.

ADDITIONAL LAND, (six lots) costing in the aggregate $3,500 is needed to complete the fifteen acre compound (or enclosure) containing the hospital, schools and mission residences. Its purchase will secure to the Church one of the finest mission compounds in China and ensure room for the satisfactory development of the Anking mission.
